Dear West Michigan Works!

It is my pleasure to share with you the success story of Ivan Guerrero, who was able to attend a welding training through M-TEC as a result of the training grant.

Ivan started with Altron Automation in 2017 as a saw operator. In this role, it was essential for him to have an understanding of how to cut our raw material that would be used for machine building. However, there are times when the cut material also needs to be welded. Ivan did not previously have this experience, so the welding class was able to help him fulfill other parts of his job that he could not previously.

Now that Ivan has had this training, he has been promoted into the role of machine builder. The skills that he has learned as a result of this training have allowed him to move into a new role, one that will provide him with many more opportunities in the future.

Here at Altron Automation, we are all very grateful for the training grant and the opportunities it affords our employees like Ivan.

Thank you,
